How positively or negatively do Americans feel about these mid-term election ads?

Over the last few days, Roy Morgan Research tested a selection of ads with The Reactor - an online device that continuously measures respondents’ reactions.

The reactions of over 500 respondents confirm that, typically, Americans tend to react negatively to messages that are entirely negative.