ANZ Economist, Madeline Dunk, commented:

Despite a small drop last week, ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence is up 4.6pts over the past fortnight. The fact that consumer confidence held onto most of last week's sizeable 5.9pt gain suggests households may be seeing the benefits of the Stage 3 tax cuts. Particularly as the biggest improvement has been in households' confidence in their own financial situation. Relative to two weeks ago, households' confidence in their current financial position has risen 5.1pts, while confidence in their financial position in a year's time is up 5.8pts. Over this period, confidence has increased most for those who own their homes outright (+6.8pts), followed by renters (+3.1pts) and those paying off a mortgage (+1.6pts).
